Workshop presenters

Lindsay Schofield - Compassion Fatigue

Lindsay is an accredited psychotherapist (BABCP, BACP, ACC and NCP), supervisor and trainer with a private practice in London. With a breadth of training, her qualifications and experience include specialisms in trauma and dissociation, supervision and compassion fatigue.

Lindsay has written and delivered workshops for mental health and caring professionals over many years, both in the UK and internationally. Currently she is pursuing a research degree in Compassion Fatigue and is developing the material for publication as a self-help manual for professionals in caring roles.

Daniël Louw - Sexuality & Gender

Prof. Louw, emeritus professor in Theology and Pastoral Care at Stellenbosch University, has both academic and practical ministry experience. He served as a minister before joining the faculty of Stellenbosch University, where he was responsible for Practical Theology, Pastoral Theology and Pastoral Counselling.

Pastoral Care focuses on chaplaincy, terminal care, marriage and family enrichment, as well as on social issues, such as poverty and Aids. After his retirement Prof. Louw has continued to co-operate in these fields.

Prof. Louw addresses the topic of human sexuality and gender with practical compassion, care and theoretical insight.

Sikelela Dlamini- Mental Health in the Church

Sikelela Dlamini is an NLP Practitioner; with a master's degree in Counselling Psychology from Lee University in Cleveland, Tennessee USA. He majored in personality theories, human growth and development, counselling theories and techniques, psychopathology, lifestyle/career development, and human sexuality. He trained as a Counselling Psychologist and has worked as a behavioural specialist and special needs educator in various settings in the USA and Africa; developing, implementing and coordinating programs.

Mr Dlamini has over 15 years of successful working experience with and for NGOs. He founded Swaziland's first Autism Centre, facilitated the establishment of an Autism Centre in Kenya and coordinated the founding of an NGO trust in Malawi. He joined Philippi Trust SA in February 2017.

Kay Lorentz & Barbara Clarke - Resilience Building

For over 10 years Resilient Kids SA has been developing and implementing courses aimed at helping adults raise resilient children.

In this workshop, Kay and Barbara, will explain the philosophy and methodology Resilient Kids SA has used in many contexts and countries. Using experiential learning activities parents, care-givers, teachers and others learn how to relate to children in ways that help the child to develop emotional language, emotional regulation, and other resilience skills.
